The people who need more religion are: The man who lets his horse stand all day in the rain without a blanket; the man who grows like a beast with a sore head when his wife asks him for money; the woman who whispers it around that someone else is not just what she ought to be; the preacher who is always looking for a easier place and higher salary; the man who walks the streets with his hands in his pockets while his wife carries the baby; and the man who keeps a dog and says he can't afford the home newspaper.

If you require to renew your old Loan or take out a new one call and see me, as I can save you money. I represent the N. of Scotland Can. Mortgage Co., The Canada Life, and others.

Local Improvement—District 280 has been changed into a Municipality and a meeting will be held in the Floral Schoolhouse, on Monday, December 1st, between the hours of 2 and 4 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the position of councillors, five of which will be required. If owners of Alberta land, who wish to exchange same for Ranches, Grain or Fruit and other properties in Oregon's mild climate, will confer with me I will enlist my services in their behalf.

Domestic Change Only

Approve of the new bilingual English-French postcards, it was explained at the Postoffice Department that the card is an innovation only so far as it affects domestic circulation in Canada. There has always been a two-cent postcard to send almost anything this has been in French as well as in English.

It is one of the rules of the postal union that all such cards must be in French as well as in the language of the country from which they are sent.

It is interesting to think that a number of thousand babies of today will develop into United States senders.

A Forgotten Burns Poem

Dr. Samuel Johnson's letter to the Earl of Chesterfield, one of the classics of English literature, now has a companion piece in a recently discovered poem by Robert Burns, hitherto unpublished, says the New York World. The poem was found in the possession of Mrs. John Moffat of St. Andrews, Scotland, and, as told in the preface by the poet, it was composed and presented to the nobleman addressed "upon being called up from the servants' hall, where he had been sent to dine along with them, to add to the entertainment of his company. The poet adds: On presenting which he put on his hat, turned on his heel and retired.

There are thirty-one lines in the poem, the closing part of which is as follows:
Among our lordship's hopeful guests
There must be here some sad mistake
I would not play for such a stake
Be a buffoon for drink and meat.
At a poor earl's tax paid seat!
No, sir, my heart, ere such a shame
Descends on Robert Burns' name!

AN OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS

Was Ordered by His Doctor, But Cautious Cure Was Effected by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.
Almost anyone who has suffered from appendicitis will assure you that this trouble developed only after months or years of derangements of the liver and bowels.

Appendicitis can almost invariably be prevented, and very frequently cured, by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. In the case described in this letter the doctors had ordered an operation, but a thorough cure was brought about by this great medicine.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis, and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation, or even of a doctor, as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

A Suggestion
At the dinner table on board an ocean liner a man was much annoyed by the vulgar manner in which his next neighbor ate.
He tried to take no notice of the man, but after watching him pick a bone in an extremely primitive fashion he could not control his feelings any longer, and turning to the offender he said:
"Don't you really think you would be more comfortable if you took that bone out on the boat?"

No More Asthma. Dr. J. D. Kellough's Asthma Remedy shows the death knell of this trying trouble. It stops the awful choking and painful breathing. It guards against night attacks and gives renewed ability to sleep and rest the whole night long. Much is claimed for this remedy, but nothing but what can be demonstrated by a trial. If you suffer from asthma try it and convince yourself of its great value.

Not His Job

A seedy-looking man applied to the late Mr. O'Leary Carle, in the days of his management at the Savoy, for a job. Mr. Carle was just then trying some candidates for the chorus, and as the man was very persistent, he turned to the pianist and asked him to play an accompaniment for him. With some hesitation the stranger raised his voice.

"What do you mean by this tomfoolery?" shouted Mr. O'Leary Carle. You have the impudence to ask me for a job?"

"I ain't no singer, replied the man. I don't want to sing. I'm a sign carpenter and only sign a plaque you!"

Any Man

A well-known university professor, says The Youth's Magazine (Boston) who has been taking much interest in the woman's suffrage movement, was recommended to carry a banner in a parade that was held in New York some months ago. His wife, observed him marching with a dejected air and carrying his banner so that it hung limply on its standard, and later she reproved him for not making a better appearance.

Why didn't you march like some body, and let people see your banner? she said.

My dear, merely replied the professor, did you see what was on the banner? It read: Any man can vote, why can't I?

These Pills Cure Rheumatism.—To the many who suffer from rheumatism a trial of Parnele's Vegetable Pills is recommended. They have pronounced action upon the liver and kidneys and by regulating the action of these organs act as an alternative in preventing the admixture of uric acid and blood that causes this painful disorder. They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

A Severe Blow

In the editorial chief's asked the visitor as he strolled into the magazine office at eight o'clock in the morning.

No, sir, answered the charwoman, politely. He doesn't get here so early. Is there anything I can do for you?

Perhaps you can, I suppose you are not connected with the poetical department of the magazine?

Ah, yes sir, was the quick reply. You are? And what do you do?

I empty the wastepaper baskets, sir.

JAPANESE COTTON

Its Bearing on the Cotton Trade of Canada and United States

By living on a scale which would starve an American or a European, and by constantly striving to perfect their manufacturing processes, the Japanese are taking considerable trade from the United States in spite of the high tariff of that country. Senator Smoot explained to the United States Senate the other day how Japan had already taken the cotton trade of Manchuria from the United States, and would soon control the entire demand of China. It would seem evident that as Japan takes away the trade in cottons from the United States that that country will try to redeem its losses by selling more cotton in Canada, especially if our duty is reduced.

The Canadian tariff on gray and white cotton fabrics is only 25 per cent. and on colored cotton fabrics 32½ per cent. Japan is not one of our serious competitors, as yet, probably, because she is confining her efforts to taking away the Asiatic export trade of the United States. But during the year ending March 31st, 1913, we imported cotton manufactures worth $1,877,000 from Great Britain and $2,521,565 worth from the United States.

Those who advocate increasing the British Preference should consider the effect of such an increase on our cotton industry. A recent official report of the British Government states that 16 per cent. of the men engaged in the cotton industry in England earn less than $5 per week, working full time, nearly 44 per cent. earn between $5 and $7.30, thirteen per cent. of the women working full time, earn less than $2.40 a week, while 29 per cent. earn between $2.40 and $3.50 a week. The average hours of labor in the English cotton industry are 55.5 a week. Do we want these wages for the men and women who are engaged in the Canadian cotton industry?

A brick and clay products plant will shortly be erected in Taber, Alta., for the Canada West Mines.

The Dethronement of Douglas

It Didn't Last Long After the Explanation Came.

By JANE INGRAMHAM.

Harriet Winthrop belonged to the class of girls who bow to physical strength in the opposite sex. First, at most flowerlike in her beauty, the sort of girl who had been protected and served all her life, she yet devoted her tiny morning room with etchings and small statues of classic heroes famed for their physical prowess, and she could sit through a veritable blizzard to watch a football match and about herself home for Ted's college team.

Ted was her brother, and he said that somewhere in Harriet's makeup was a strain from the blood of an ancestral belle who had cheered on her hero in the old days. For the Winthrops could trace their lineage to the tournament days and further, and even though Mr. Winthrop had lost a large slice of the old family fortune through ill-advised investments, they maintained their social standing, lived in rather severe but elegant fashion and held fast to one very other thing, the firm belief that no lady rides in a street car or other public conveyance, she may walk abroad for exercise only, but never in a shopping the place, rather old-fashioned brougham of the depleted Winthrop stables was brought into service.

That was why when many other girls with more money to spend on shopping tripped merrily up and down the great retail thoroughfares, Harriet Winthrop chafed in the Winthrop brougham, caught in a blockade of snarling motrices, sharp faced chauffeurs and obstinate cabbies. The brougham swung to one side, the wheels grating the curb, and Harriet leaped forward to see what the cause of the delay was. No, it was not the stop where she could be found a certain piece of silver blue gowns marked down to post holiday prices. Then, with a gasp and a gasp, she leaned back in the carriage and closed her eyes. She had forgotten the silver gown, the shop, the jangle of vehicles—everything save the tall, square shouldered figure of a man whose entire attention seemed to be centered on the flat of his nose, turning in the window of a white front restaurant.

The brougham moved forward a few inches, then seemed to stop. Very soon it would be out of range, so Harriet took one more glimpse at the window to make sure that her eyes had not deceived her. No, it was not, and this time he was actually handling the white aproned waitress a plate piled high with golden roast.

What was Jerry Douglas doing in that window, and how could he be doing upon the white aproned girl—precisely the same frank, cool, and efficient waitress, which he had greeted Harriet at that last dinner, after Ted's team had won through Douglas' clever coaching? She fought him a yard more, then she needed and went home firmly convinced that Jerry Douglas had been cooking cakes for her. That night she went to a dance where many mutual friends gathered, but no one seemed to have heard of the new pair, and she was too proud to make inquiries. The next day she went back to the shop so late to the restaurant. A bit of pale blue velvet ribbon would set off that silver gown, but she decided, that, after all, she did not care whether the silver gown was developed into a creation or not. Nothing mattered save that her idol had crumbled at her very feet or, more properly speaking, within a few feet of the wheels of her brougham. Then, there again was Jerry Douglas, turning what she thought must be very fat and indigestible fried fritters.

So it was not an election wager or anything of that sort, she knew. He had gone in for sociology. He was studying the conduct of busy young men in the classes. Next thing he would be living in one of those dreadful settlement houses, holding club meetings for run muffs and poor fellows, and writing silly things for magazines—this man whom she had entrusted with ballet tickets and a box of candy, who she had pictured as saluting friends to pit his magnificent strength, physical and mental, against the magnates of the commercial and financial world.

Cooking cakes in a restaurant window? Harriet Winthrop walked with firm deliberate step to her desk and took down from the wall above it a picture showing a group of busy young men in football attire and near a certain individual picture of a young man with a finely formed head and broad square shoulders. She turned the two behind olive boxes on the top shelf of her bookcase and then sat down for a good cry.

Of course she might have found out what it all meant if Teddy had been home, but Teddy, after leaving college, had gone to Paris to follow up his studies in naval architecture. Anyhow, it did not seem probable that he had been only a girlish fancy, and then Jerry Douglas had acted rather strangely since he went back to his Virginia home—a few casual notes, no references to his future career, in which she now felt was presumption and unmanly, and so she cried some more.

And just after she had worked herself into a fine nervous state, from which she would issue forth pallid and forlorn, a messenger brought her a most amazing note. It was from Jerry Douglas, and it calmly invited Miss Winthrop to attend a little supper he was giving at the Empire restaurant in honor of his promotion. It would be served on the upper floor of the restaurant at Thursday midnight, after the rush was over, and would she please come, because Mrs. Ned Landers, one of the most famous of the city, and every one knew that Mrs. Ned was a host in herself.

Here was a perfectly legitimate avenue of inquiry which even the Winthrop pride might not hesitate to follow, so she bathed her eyes, summoned her maid, and in a few minutes Mrs. Ned Landers' smart studio apartment. Of course she could not accept the invitation and she would not decline without making known to Mrs. Landers, already reading from the white, tired face that something was amiss, and that, directly, and Harriet asked it appreciatively.

"You know, mother is a bit old-fashioned—"

"I am ever disappointed of studio flats instead of houses?" inquired Mrs. Landers, with dancing eyes.

"She thinks you are the most modern of managers in the world, but a restaurant supper—I mean that particular sort of restaurant?"

"I understand and I am just bubbling with the secret. I've been waiting to tell every one for weeks, but Jerry Douglas made me cross my heart and swear not. My dear, he is a hero, the sort you don't often find in this day of spoiled millionaires and snoring parasites. He is a hero, he is a college course and started to read law with an old friend of his father's down in Virginia he made what was called an awful discovery. His inheritance had paid only his bare expenses at college. All the little pleasures, accessories, the social end of the game, his mother had made by her own handwork. She had been doing exquisite embroidery for a woman's mansion in a New York department store to keep him at college as his father and grandfather had been kept before him.

"His next feeling, being a Virginia man of chivalric pride, was deep humiliation. I am afraid he was a bit hard on the little mother for daring to do such a thing. Then he turned his back on the law and came north, going straight to the father of a young man he had known at college, the man who rolls in wealth made in a single generation. The boy's father has all sorts of commercial interests, including a chain of quick lunch restaurants, and he promptly offered Jerry the chance to act as cashier in one of those dreadful lunch rooms."

Harriet was leaning forward, drinking in every word oblivious to the fact that Mrs. Ned was studying her face with minutely anxious eyes.

"Well, this particular lunch room was in a badly disorganized state, but Jerry not only made changes, but he fired the cook who had been making trouble, and cooked himself until he could get a decent meal. He stopped quarreling among the waitresses and now he is going to Mexico for the man who was just trying him out in a lunch room, and what is more, he is going to have a most ticklish and important mission."

Harriet leaped, ask with a sigh that might have meant request of something.

"And so he has asked just six of us to have that little supper, for which he agrees to cook all sorts of things, from pancakes to something he calls butter cakes. Anyhow, it can't be worse for our digestion than some of the things Jerry messes our friend makes in chafing dishes. Will you go?"

Harriet rose instantly.

"If you don't think me abrupt, I'm going home this minute to telephone my acceptance."

Wise Mrs. Ned did not suggest that her halfway was a telephone instrument, which Harriet had oftentimes used, and the girl went her way. Later as she hung up the telephone receiver in the Winthrop library her eyes seemed to shine like diamonds, and a soft flush mounted to her pale gold hair.

From the library she went straight to her own room, climbed up to a clothespress shelf and lugged forth two photographs. These with her hands, she sat down, studying them with eyes that still shone with the light that one must have to face the fact that the ancestral belle at the tournament.

MEASPLET THE PRINTER.

Montreal's Pioneer Printer Was a Stormy Petrel.

There are three separate and distinct introductions of the printer to the public in Canada. Each was in widely separate fields, and, therefore, to differ in the popular estimation and in the sections of the country.

The introduction that holds first place in point of time is that of 1775, when Bartholomew Green, son of the man who printed the first American newspaper, went from Boston to Nova Scotia. He was a British settler at that time—and set up a printing press in the recently founded capital of Nova Scotia. Green died within a few months after he came to Halifax, but his place in the community was taken by John Bushell, who, in March, 1780, began to publish the Halifax Gazette, the first newspaper printed in Canada.

The second introduction took place twelve years later, when, in 1787, one of Brown and Gilmore of Philadelphia, still a British city, came to Quebec and opened a printing establishment, which produced for the government the official Gazette and other official matter, all of which were published in the two languages. This was only four years after the capture of Quebec, and only a year after the signing of the Treaty of Paris which finally ended Canada to the British Crown.

These two introductions of printing are commensurate events in comparison with the introduction which even the Winthrop pride might not hesitate to follow, so she bathed her eyes, summoned her maid, and in a few minutes Mrs. Ned Landers' smart studio apartment.

Of course she could not accept the invitation and she would not decline without making known to Mrs. Landers, already reading from the white, tired face that something was amiss, and that, directly, and Harriet asked it appreciatively.

A NORTHERN PRATTLE.

Bishop Reeve Knows the Wit, as Few Men Do.

The largest diocese in the world is that of Bishop Reeve, of MacKenzie River. One realizes the immensity of Canada's hinterland only when he has heard of it from one who, like Bishop Reeve, has spent his life beyond the outskirts of civilization. Recently in a lecture in Toronto his lordship was constituting his diocese in the north. He has a "diocese" of half a million square miles, while another 300,000 square miles were also in his charge. "Standing at my door-step (if we had a step, of which I am not certain), it was 1,000 miles by trail to my farthest station," said Bishop Reeve, "almost as far as from here to the Pacific coast. We used to have for almost all our food, and in those days it took three months to reach my post at Fort Simpson."

Bishop Reeve showed some most interesting slides of tar sand-banks on the Athabasca River, where coal-oil is surely to be found, and will one day prove most valuable, and where natural gas is extremely abundant, and gushed out in its place, which if lighted, flares to a height of 15 or 20 feet.

"Part of the territory is semi-arid," said Bishop Reeve, "with coarse grasses, a few willows, and nothing else. On the other coast is a desert of desolation. The only wood they are stranded on the river banks, having floated down. Strange to say, willow flowers grow in some profusion on Athabasca shores, and no less than 150 different varieties have been discovered by a man in that region, who made a hobby of searching for them."

"The first thing I saw of the ice formed," said the bishop, "by the water pushing the ice away to the banks, was a great wall of ice, and great ice boulders over on top of the other, making it look like a miniature Hoover dam. The water rose 50 feet, owing to an ice jam, and everyone became extremely fearful."

DESTRUCTION DAY

Rid the House of Clutter to Cheer It.

WHY NOT THE SIMPLE LIFE?

Throw Out All Furniture, Pictures and Odds and Ends That Are Unnecessary and You Will Make Home More Attractive.

Every one—certainly, at least every woman—sometimes undergoes a revolution against "things," particularly things that clutter up the house, and she longs for the simple life.

To put this new system of simple living in effect begin with a destruction day. Fix in your mind that this is the day of destruction, and really bothers you and determine that you will rid yourself of much of this clutter.

Begin in your living room. Think of the beauty of a room with the furniture of which consists of a few necessities, a few pieces of good pottery and some embroidered wall panels. Get a picture of a Pompeian house and study the effect gained from its bare spaces and roomy airiness.

When you have once filled your mind with a desire for space and simplicity begin the process of destruction. Take down all but the best of your pictures. If you don't want to throw them away give them away, and if you don't want to do that put them in the attic until you have forgotten you like them.

If you have many really valuable and interesting ornaments put them in a cabinet with glass doors, where they will seem what they really are—a collection of curiosities.

After you have rigorously thinned out the ornaments and pictures tack the furniture. Remove any of it that is rickety and broken and either have it mended or else throw it away. At any rate, have every piece of furniture left in the room in usable condition.

AFTERNOON TEA.

It's the Custom Nowadays to Serve Callers With Light Refreshments.

Afternoon teas are the fashionable fad of today and without doubt will become a custom of the future. It goes on. This custom of serving tea to guests in the afternoon is such a simple affair, conducted with so little ceremony that it cannot be too elaborate. It is a custom of the future, and it is a custom of the future.

It is a custom of the future, and it is a custom of the future. It is a custom of the future, and it is a custom of the future. It is a custom of the future, and it is a custom of the future.

The Fall Trade

It Brought With It Business of Another Kind

By MILLARD MALTBIE

"Ethel," I said to my fiancée, "we must fix our wedding day either before the fall trade begins or after it is over, for I can't get away when it is on. If we fix it before it must be within, say, a month; if after we shall need to put it off for at least three months."

"I am afraid," said Ethel reflectively, "that it must be later rather than before. I've done very little in the way of getting ready and couldn't possibly complete my preparations within a month."

"You mean buy your trousseau?"

"Well, yes. But there are some small matters that need to be cleared up before we're married, and they all require time."

"Such as—"

"Oh, they are of no importance to me, simply affairs between me and acquaintances of mine."

"Obligations you wish to pay off?"

"Oh, no; not that at all. I'm not indebted to any one for favors."

"Old scores then?"

"That's more like it."

"Mention one of them."

"Well, there's Nell Blanchard. Last summer when we were at the Springs together she treated me very badly. Ned Franklin was there and devoted himself to me. Ned predicted him against me and got him away."

"What sort of a retaliation do you propose?"

"That's something I wish to speak to you about especially. You may object."

"Well, out with it."

"Why, only this. I can punish her in to show her that I can have him if I want him."

"Punish?"

"I was afraid you'd not mean about it."

"You mean that on the eve of your marriage with me you propose to bring down another man?"

"Only to punish Nell Blanchard as she should be punished."

"Do you think that it is treating me right to carry on a flirtation while"

"I was afraid you'd not mean about it."

for me. I never considered a girl a woman, but, rather one to be played like a ban. I had supposed that I had landed Ethel, but now I saw that the landing must be deferred. So I told her that we had better put off our wedding till after the fall trade, and by that time I expected she would have paid all her indebtedness in the way of punishments and would have especially caused Nell Blanchard to rue the day that she had stepped in between Ethel and Ned Franklin.

At this she declared I must not imagine she would encourage Franklin.

We had a busy season, but I was not too busy to keep an eye on my fiancée.

A lover is a pessimist, and I was by no means easy in my mind upon this vindication Nell was arranging for herself. Franklin I knew had been her favorite before I had appeared on the scene, and prior to our engagement I had suspected that I was serving for a mare by which to trip him. I heard something of his recent attentions to Ethel since she had begun her vindication, and some of my intimate friends, who knew that I was interested in her, began to look upon me with commiseration. Now and again I asked Ethel how she was getting on with her vindication, and she said that Nell was simply green with envy and jealousy.

I have never believed in defensive warfare. It is a military principle that the advantage preponderates to the attacking force. I considered the matter over and over, and finally told Ethel that if Nell was green with envy and jealousy nothing more was required and there was no further need for her vindication. I was interested in the matter; also that she had been reported to be engaged to him and all the surprise she could wish for would be that when her real suitor should be given out, with the wedding soon to follow. But did not Ethel know this without my telling her? And if she knew it what was to be gained by telling her?

If Mr. Franklin was destined to win her, he would win her. I was sure he would—the end would be Ethel's giving me a ridiculous story of her having unwittingly, unknowingly and unintentionally got into an unfortunate position and that she was obliged to give him to me or Mr. Franklin and she was absolutely crushed; also that she had loved him and had loved her till that horrid Nell Blanchard had come between them and made all the trouble. Then under such distressing circumstances I would be expected to do a magnanimous, noble part by relieving her of her frightful embarrassment by giving her to him.

One day I received a note from Ethel chiding me for not having been to see her for a week. She simply asked my attention to the fact without comment. I replied that the fall trade was at its height, and I was working nights. I received another note stating that I had not worked every night, for I had been seen at the theater in company with a pretty girl a few evenings before. My reply to this was a confession. The young lady I had taken to the theater had once been a "flame" of mine. She possessed certain letters I had written her when I thought I loved her, while I was desirous to get into my possession before he married. I never told her this I must disclose. When I had won her confidence I could the better devise a scheme for securing the letters.

I was quite sure this would bring matters to a climax, and it did. Ethel wrote me to come and see her at once. I delayed she would expect her engagement ring I had given her. I thought over my next move and decided to go to see her. I found her very much troubled, though she endeavored to conceal evidence of the fact. Her face was heated, her eyes were restless and her bosom heaved.

"Why did you not tell me of this former love affair?" she asked in an accusatory tone.

"Because I supposed it was of long ago."

"And now it's on again."

"To this I made no reply. I looked at the ceiling."

"Unless you wish to break with me you must drop it at once."

"I have not yet recovered my letters."

"Your letter! Nonsense!"

"There was another silence. I took my eyes from the ceiling and directed them out through a window.

"Well, what are you going to do?" Ethel asked.

I responded in a quiet, reflective tone that if she would not object to my letters being used against me after my marriage with her I would let them remain where they were. I would call the next evening upon the lady possessing them and endeavor to persuade her to give up all idea of their ever being utilized between us.

"It is necessary that you should call to do that?"

"Can't you write?"

"I committed myself in these letters that if she would not object to my use as a diplomatic in setting myself right between Franklin and Nell Blanchard. If by the by, how is that affair progressing?"

I looked at her with a sad smile.

"I have failed it," she replied rue-fully. "Indeed. It's a pity I had not taken up mine earlier; then they would both have been ended together."

"I thought you said you would end the matter at once."

"I said I would endeavor to do so."

"She had taken hold of her engagement ring and was trying with it. I knew she was meditating taking it off and handing it to me."

"You would not have me treat a girl who loves me harshly, would you?"

"You know how you have situated yourself with regard to Franklin."

"There was a long silence. I thought it time to bring the matter to a focus. 'I will make you a proposition,' I said. 'Drop Franklin without a word, written or spoken, and I will do the same in my own case.'

Another long silence, at the end of which she put out her hand to me and that was the end of paying off old scores. By this time the rush of the fall trade was over and we were married within a month. We passed over the border dividing the single from the married state, and premarital nonsense gave way to matrimonial conditions.

When Thanks Were Given.

Many years ago a noted chief of the tribe of Chippewa Indians had hunted and killed a deer and followed it for miles. The chase was long and very severe, and the Indian was in the last stages of exhaustion from fatigue and lack of food and water when he found himself on the top of a wonderful mountain, at the foot of which nestled a beautiful lake crystal clear. From the top of the mountain he looked down upon the shore lay the deer he had hunted. Here were food, water, fish and fuel for cooking.

But when he was about to descend the mountain, the exhausted chief exclaimed, "Isah-pen-ging," which in the Chippewa tongue means "heaven" or "the gods."

The story was remembered, and the name given by the Indian was adopted by the white settlers when the present city of Leavenworth, Kan., was founded. —Ladies' Home Journal.

Inexperience.

In a boarding house for bachelors Amanda, a typical "mummy," looked after the guests' comfort in her own style, so well that one of the moon-bathe he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in his hall and told her that he was in love with her.

"Mandy, do you like the country?"

"Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"

Mandy was sure she would.

"Suppose I get a bugaboo. Do you think you could take care of it alone by yourself?"

"Mandy gasped and rolled her eyes.

"Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all be get some other; I don't know nothin' about takin' care of any animals." —Harper's Magazine.

Antiquity of Nagging.

No, if you are nagged you are not alone in your experience. Nor are the nagged persons of this age the only victims of nagging. Nagging is an old custom. They tell us that Adam, Job, Socrates, Aesop, Leonidas, Machiavelli and many other distinguished historical personages were victims of nagging. This proves the antiquity but not the wisdom or the respectability of nagging. And if it is so old as it is claimed to be let it crawl away somewhere to die. For, come to think of it, nagging is just as hurtful to the nagger as it is to the nagged. So why injure ourselves for the purpose of injuring some one else? Samson did that, you know, when he pulled down the temple of Gaza and broke his own back. Rather a poor example to follow, eh? —Detroit Free Press.

Wrote in Bed.

Mark Twain wrote nearly all his later books in bed. So persistent was "sluggard" was he that he had a specially contrived bed desk fitted up so that he could write without trouble or exertion while propped luxuriously among his pillows. He used to aver that most of his best thoughts came to him in bed and that he would not have been able to get up and write them down if he had not been in bed. —Washington Star.

Careless.

"Have you made a special study of the subject on which you are going to lecture?"

"No," replied the gifted speaker. "I tried that once, and I got so interested in the subject that I didn't have time to write the lecture." —Washington Star.

The aim of futurist sculpture, says a futurist, is simply the "symbolism of human dynamism," which is to be achieved by "utilizing atmospheric blocks with elements of concrete reality." Could anything be simpler and more elementary? —Chicago Record Herald.

WHY SCOTSMEN SUCCEED.

England's Inferior Education Is Alleged as a Reason.

Harold Spender, in a recent London News says:

The vivid pen pictures of English private schools given to the House of Commons by the Minister of Education have come to a shock. Nothing is so one-pointed as the English schoolmaster, and the work of Dickens never done over again.

Matthew Arnold pointed this out with all his power a generation ago, and the story has been since repeated by many brilliant writers and critics. But the English people are deaf, and in hundreds of cases parents prefer to send their children to these schools even when there are the very best free public schools round the corner. Bad education seems somehow always to consort with gentility.

But now certain remarkable signs are appearing. The boys from the council schools, profiting by a thorough training at the most impressionable years, are invading our secondary schools and universities, and compelling our teachers to look at the facts in the face. The other day ten council school boys appeared as candidates at Cambridge. I am informed that in many of the secondary schools of the L.C.C. winners of scholarship examinations take the lead of the middle-class children.

At the universities, too, the public schools still keep an iron hand over the sports, but in matters of education they are losing their grip. From the grammar schools and the council schools, it is clear that a new type of education is approaching. The middle-class parent will have to wake up if he and his offspring are to avoid the defeat of the struggle. A national comparison reveals the same facts. In secondary education England comes far behind Scotland and Wales. The higher education of Scotland, stimulated by the great Glasgow Free Trade, is moving steadily forward both in the schools and in the universities.

It would have to be supplied in the caves, and this could be done either by small boreholes to the surface, such as are not uncommon in coal mines, or by pipe lines, and pumping the explosion proof—running through the mine passages. The cave connected with the surface by a borehole could be supplied with air freely and kept in touch with the surface by a telephone, and food could be sent down through the hole.

A cave connected by a conduit through the mine could also have telephone communication with the surface, but it would be necessary in this case to keep a quantity of concentrated food and some water stored in the chamber. PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Concerning Drunduff.

Alcohol applied several times a week to the scalp will cure dandruff. If you find that this makes the scalp and hair too dry add six teaspoonfuls of castor oil to one pint of alcohol. No one should neglect dandruff during the winter. It has appeared. If allowed to continue it will become very thin and baldness may result. It is very necessary to keep the scalp clean while it is thus diseased. Dandruff is infectious, so be very careful that no one uses your comb and brush or wears your hat. These are the things that usually spread the disease.

CHAPTER IV

Little Miss Jane

What did you do with that bag? I felt his knee on my chest.

What bag? I inquired feebly.

Don't be a fool, he persisted. I don't get that bag within five minutes I'll fill you as full of holes as a cheese.

I haven't seen my bag, I said stupidly.

What sort of a bag? I heard my own voice, drunk from the shock.

Paper bag, laundry bag.

You've hidden it in the house, he said, bringing the revolver a little closer with every word.

Go in and look, I responded. I do not know anything about a bag, but if you will give me your word there was nothing in it belonging to this house I will take you in and let you look for it.

The next moment he had lowered the revolver and clenched my arm.

Who in the devil's name are you? he asked wildly.

I think the thing dawned on us both at the same moment.

My name is Knox, I said coolly.

John Knox.

Knox! He stretched the candle from me and, holding it up, searched my face. Then good God—where is my travelling bag? I am Harry Wardrop, and I have been robbed, Mr. Knox. I was trying to get in the house without waking the family, and when I came back here to the front door, where I had left my valise, it was gone. I thought you were the thief when you came out, and—we've lost all this time. Somebody has followed me and robbed me!

What was in the bag? I asked.

Valuable papers, he said shortly. You are certain you left it here?

Where you are standing.

Something glittered beneath the step, and I discovered a small brown leather travelling bag, apparently quite new.

Here it is, I said, not so gracious as I might have been. I am suffering considerably for that travelling bag.

The sight of it restored Wardrop's pulse.

By Jove, I am glad to see it, he said. I can't explain, but tremendous things were depending on that bag, Mr. Knox. I don't know how to apologize to you for I must have nearly brained you.

You did, I said grimly, and gave him the bag. The moment he took it I knew there was something wrong. He hurried into the house and lighted the library lamp. Then he opened the travelling bag with shaking fingers. It was empty!

It's a trick, he said furiously. You've hidden it somewhere. This is not my bag. You've substituted one just like it.

Don't be a fool, I retorted. How could I substitute an empty satchel for yours when up to fifteen minutes ago I had never seen you or your grip satchel.

He dropped into a chair, and after a pause I was followed in. Plattsburg. Two men watched me from the minute I got there on Tuesday. I changed my hotel, and all of yesterday—Wednesday, that is—I felt secure again. But on the way to the train I felt that I was under surveillance again, and by turning quickly I came face to face with one of the men. I thought he was a detective. You know I've had all of that sort of thing lately, with election coming on. He didn't get on the train, however.

But the other one may have done so.

When we drew in at Bellwood station I distinctly remember opening the bag and putting my newspaper and railroad schedule inside. It was the night of the 10th. My clothing was in it and my brushes.

I had been examining the empty bag as he talked, and I asked:

Where did you put your railroad schedule? I asked.

He looked at me for a moment at the side.

It is here, I said, drawing out the yellow folder. For a moment my companion looked almost haunted.

The whole thing is impossible. That valise was heavy when I walked up from the station. I changed it from one hand to the other because of the weight. When I got there I set it down on the edge of the porch and opened the door. When I found it locked.

But it wasn't locked, I broke in.

When I came downstairs to look for a burglar I found it open at least an inch.

She stopped in his pacing up and down and looked at me curiously.

We're both crazy, then, he asserted.

Yes, I told you I tried every way I knew to unlock that case, and could hear the chain rattling. Undoubtedly you are ignorant of the fact that this house is furnished up at night.

Nevertheless it was unlocked when I came down.

The sound of a smothered exclamation from the doorway caused us both to turn suddenly. Standing there in a loose gown of some sort very much surprised and startled, was Margery Fleming.

What is the matter? she asked uncertainly. I heard such queer noises. Mr. Wardrop was trying to break in. I explained, and I came down. On the way I had a bloody encounter with an open door.

I don't think she quite believed me. She looked from my swollen head to the open bag and then to Wardrop's pale face. Then I think, womanlike, she remembered the two great braids that hung over her shoulders and the dressing gown she wore, for she backed precipitately into the hall.

It is only half past two, I said, glancing at my watch. We might look around outside.

Holocaust as he was, his feverish excitement made me think that some thing vital hung on the recovery of the contents of that Russian leather bag. But we found nothing.

As I look back on that night the key to what had passed and to much that was coming was so simple, so directly and yet so missed it entirely. It was some time before we learned the true inwardness of the events of that night.

I was almost unrecognizable when I looked at myself in the mirror the next morning, preparatory to dressing for breakfast. My nose bore a new arch like the back of an angry cat, making my profile Roman and aristocratic. The lower part of my forehead from the chair was swollen, gleamy and purple. I turned my back to the mirror and dressed in washable and my yesterday's linen.

Miss Fleming was in the breakfast room. I have carried with me during all the months since that time a mental picture of her as she stood there in a pink morning frock of some sort. But only the other day, having mentioned it to her, she assured me that the frock was blue. So I assumed that she had been in a blue frock was facing the door when I went into the breakfast room. Of one thing I am certain, she held out her hand.

Good morning, she said. What a terrible face.

It isn't mine, I replied meekly. My own face is beneath these excruciating I tried to cover the bump on my forehead with French chalk, but it only accentuated the thing, like snow on a mountain top.

The purple peaks of Darien, she quoted, pouring me my coffee. Do you know, I feel so much better since you have taken hold of things. Aunt Letitia thinks you are wonderful.

I thought ruefully of the failure of my first attempt to play the sleuth, and I disclaimed any right to Miss Letitia's high opinion of me.

Before any case comes down, Miss Fleming, I said. I want to ask a question or two. What was the name of the thief who helped you search the house that night?

Annie.

What other maids did you say there were?

Della and Rose.

Do you know anything about them? Where they came from or where they went?

She smiled a little.

ZAM-BUK

MRS. A. SAICH, of Cannington Manor, Sask., Writes: "My brother suffered severely from indigestion. The sores were very extensive, and burned like coals into his flesh. Zam-Buk took out all the fire, and quickly gave him ease. Within three weeks of commencing with Zam-Buk treatment, every sore had been cured."

This is but one of the many letters constantly receiving from people who have proved the healing powers of Zam-Buk. For example, a child, aged three, and all skin troubles there is nothing like this wonderful balm. No skin disease should be considered ineradicable until Zam-Buk has been tried.

ROZEXA

Men Are so Uncertain

Why did you jilt that man who wanted to marry you?

Because, replied the prima donna, I couldn't decide whether he was in love with me or merely wanted to hear me sing for nothing.

Warts are unsightly blemishes, and corns are painful growths. Hollaway's Corn Cure will remove them.

Misses (to newly arrived Norwegian girl)—Can you cook?

Miss—Can you do washing?

Miss—Can you wait on table?

Miss—Well, what can you do? Girl—Can milk repellers.

The private opinion is apt to be that the general is an old blockhead.

GENIUS OF A PAINTER

Da Vinci's Prayer and Triumph of Art

While still a Pupil
It is told of Leonardo da Vinci that while still a pupil, before his genius burst into brilliancy, he received a special inspiration in this way:

His old and famous master because of his growing infirmities of age felt obliged to give up his own work and one day bade Da Vinci finish for him a picture which he had begun. The young man had such reverence for his master's skill that he shrank from the task. The old artist, however, would not accept any excuse, but persisted in his command, saying simply:
Do your best.

Da Vinci at last tremblingly seized the brush, and kneeling before the easel, said the following prayer: It is for the sake of my beloved master that I implore skill and power for this under-taking. As he proceeded his hand grew steady, his eye awoke with slumbering genius. He forgot himself and was filled with enthusiasm for his work.

When the painting was finished the old master was carried into the studio to pass judgment on the result. His eyes rested on a triumph of art.
Throwing his arms around the young artist, he exclaimed: My son, I paint
no more.

DOCTORS CONDEMN OILY LINIMENTS

Public are Warned Against Strong Smelling, Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids and Ammonia

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation, and causes endless troubles.

When the doctor warns you to quit
using a white, oily liniment—do so.
He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, an important physician stated that he considered a strong, penetrating pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica, and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache, and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

All is Well

Your letter came. Glad you bought a tin of horse. Hilda is sick. She has diphtheria, and the vet. die. I think. Clara did this eve. She had it too. We are quarantined. Five of Clara's family have got it. My wife is sick. She hasn't got it. If this thing gets worse we may have to get a doctor. Then there are budding good. Everything O.K.

A Safe Prediction

Well, what is your opinion of our political outlook now?
My opinion of it is that there is going to be a lot of useless talk before anybody is elected and that the man who is chosen will not succeed in satisfying everybody who votes for him.

Dairy Branch.

A School Teacher's Enterprise.

One of the most interesting letters recently received by the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, is from a school teacher in Alberta who asks for record forms and literature on the subject of cow testing, because—now listen: Some of the boys in the school are starting a contest in recording the production of individual cows to last one year.

This opens up a most promising field for every school teacher and for thousands of boys in our country schools. In this we would be following somewhat slowly in the wake of many schools in the United States and New Zealand where the use of the Babcock milk tester has been taught for some time. In a dairy country like this, we should be out blazing trails for other teachers and boys to follow.

No better work could be taken up by such lads, for any record work of that kind must infallibly lead to better, vastly better, conditions on dairy farms. Probably these Alberta lads will soon be excellent dairymen obtaining seventy-five or one hundred dollars per cow.

Needless to say the Dairy Division will be only too ready to supply blank forms and instructions in all such cases.

To Celebrate One Hundred Years Peace.

Crossfield has been invited to assist with the celebration of 100 years of peace between Great Britain and the United States. The invitation takes the form of a letter addressed to the Chairman of the Council, requesting his attendance at an organization meeting to be held in Calgary on the evening of November 20th, at 8 15 p.m., when the election of a permanent committee to direct the peace celebration arrangements will come before the various delegates.

Christmas Eve, 1914, will witness exactly 100 years of peace between this country and the neighbouring republic. With one of the longest border lines separating the two nations, and with many rival industries, the completion of 100 years of peace between these two countries calls for some fitting celebration. The occasion will be marked in a practical manner in many centres in Great Britain, the United States and Canada, and in order that Southern Alberta may not be behind in this celebration, it is proposed to organize at once for the work, and for that reason a meeting has been called in Calgary.

Refer to W. Urquhart's full page advertisement for Cash prices of his goods. It will be noticed there are large number of additions this week. His slogan is "Deal Where It Pays to Buy for Cash."

How the Canadian Policy of Moderate Protection Brings Industries

If the American manufacturer establishes a branch, let us say in France or Germany, he may do so because he has to meet the peculiar tastes and demands of a people who want the article made their way or at least in a different way from what appeals to the tastes and meets the conditions of the American customer. He may also be influenced by the inconvenience in distributing to a country on the other side of the world from his factory.

But he is not compelled to establish a branch factory in Canada by the above reasons, either of which might be effective in the case of countries upon another continent. He has an identical constituency in Canada and the United States. When he comes to Canada he does not manufacture differently to meet any peculiar taste or demand. So far as pleasing his trade is concerned he has no difficulty in selling in Canada what he manufactures in the United States.

Neither have we observed any oceans three thousand miles wide between the United States manufacturer and the Canadian consumer. The manufacturer can distribute to Canadian customers just as conveniently from Boston or Minneapolis as he can from Halifax or Winnipeg.

It is moderate protection which preserves the Canadian home market. The American manufacturers say that they build factories here because they cannot manufacture in the United States, pay the duty and compete in the Canadian market with the Canadian manufacturer. They probably know what they are talking about.

It would take 800,000 full moons to equal cloudless sunshine.

Extension Lectures.

Extension lectures are being arranged for this term by the Department of Extension of the University of Alberta in a large number of centres. Last year lectures were given at ten centres in all and this year some twenty towns will receive courses. Members of communities wishing lectures should apply at once to the Department of Extension so that if possible dates may be arranged.

Advantages of Community Efforts in Dairying.

"As soon as any community becomes known as the centre of pure bred and grade cattle, buyers will be attracted because they know they can buy stock in carload lots. In one Wisconsin district nearly a quarter million dollars worth of Holstein cattle have been sold in a single season."

The above statement of Professor Humphrey of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin before stock breeders, convention shows the wisdom of the farmers in a district specializing along one certain line, in that way winning a reputation for the district as a whole.
